

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A plasma display panel includes a transparent electrode pair spaced by a predetermined gap within a discharge cell. Each electrode in the pair includes an expanding part having a width which enlarges as it approaches the center of the discharge cell, and a head part which is connected to the expanding part and has a constant width and reduces power consumption. Such a structure improves brightness